LIFE IN CAIRO.

Seductive Influences of a Sojourn in Egypt.

Daily Life and Picturesque Scenes in An Oriental City.

A correspondent of the Louisville Courier Journal thus seau ively describes the sweetness of doing nothing in modern Cairo: When one is fairly in Egypt, floating softly on the undulating tide of life in Cairo, one wonders why one's time and adjectives were wasted on Europe; why people are ever contented to stop short of the desert.

Cairo, with its strange history and stranger streets, its mosques and bazaars, is a charming study. All nations meet here; all languages and all customs obtain here, and of wonderful costumes and merchandise there is no end. In this sweetest of winter climates life seems too short to be in a hurry; indeed, it is not worth living unless one can loiter. The donkeys and cats alone would make a lifelong study; when they lift up their voices either singly concert, the in verv stars in heaven quake, and the moon turns pale and trembles. And then there are the people who own the cats and who side the donkeys-several decades might be devoted to them. An Egyptian woman is an object when on foot; but when she mounts a donkey she is a vision! To begin with, she rides on both sides of the animal, and when her curious black drapery bags out in the wind, and the donkey disappears, save that his big cars and small legs twinkle occasionally into view, sensations fade, worls fail, and one feels the need of rest and nourishment. Dodging under camels; stepping over dogs and children; pushing aside donkeys and people, one finds a narrow aley leading off the Mouskee, and seeming to wind its tortuous way in strange places. One or two smaller alleys turn off; then before you rises a low archway. The shadow is very deep; you are evidently under a house, and a keen wind, like that in a narrow mountain defile, nearly takes your hat off. A wide gate stands open; one moment takes you through, past the group of guardian Arabs; you turn a corner, and before you opens the beautiful garden of the hote'.

Sycamores and acacias bend and droop over the flower beds, roses and flour de lys wave in the wind; great bamboos, more than forty feet high, sway with a long, slow motion; the red hibiscus burns like fire in the green gloom; the shadowy palms whisper softly to the fresh wind coming in from the desert; the little wag-tails hop about the path; the doves mourn their hearts out in the tree-tops; the cloudless, rainless sky spreads blue above, and the sun comes down between the leaves in a thousand golden streams. People who know how to live in Egypt come here, and life goes on as it should in the land of the lotus. Excursions are made easily; sights are seen intelligently; there is quiet talk and peaceful thought here in the fragrant garden. An artist paints with his Arab and Fellah models grouped in the sunshine on the piazza; further on an Englishman sits translating an Arab book; still further down the vine-draped vista some Arab sheiks are bargaining with knowing Egyptologists for antiques -scarabs and ugly little gols-strange old rings and Coptic embroideries.

Down in the garden the artist's wife and an American woman drum softly on darabukkah, while on the path in front of them a Fellah girl kneels, trying faithfully to teach them a native song. Strange and wild it is, with an unaccountable measure that can only be caught by ear, not learned by method. Near by a conjuror does his marvellous tricks, his mysterious call of "galla, galla," now and then rising above the barbaric song. An East Indian merchant, with his rich stuffs spread over chairs and benches, his gold and silver wares glitting in the sunlight, chaffers persuasively with a group of people, who try vainly to look sufficiently indifferent to make him lower his prices. The noonday sun is blazing overhead; the birds are still, and the roses droop a little; but sitting quietly in the shade it is not so bad, and the desert wind coming over the garden of a neighboring sheik, has a crisp, cool touch to it. Later the scene dissolves, and the company go their different ways, to meet again after dinner under the broad fall of moonlight. Then eigars and talk of the day's doings, stories of odd adventures, stories of "old times," when they first came down into Egypt, and so the pleasant days drift

Saved from a Tiger's Jaw. Only a few months ago, in India, in a certain planting district there was a notorious man eater. Two gentlemen, A and B, residing on an estate, had lost, besides other employes, two chowkebars, or native watchmen, within a few days, and the unfortunate men had been actually carried off out of the veranda of the bungalow. A and B therefore determined to clothe themselves like natives, and sit during the night, armed, in the veranda, in the hopes they might be able to get a shot at the man eater, who, they thought, might probably return to the spot which had already provided him with two victims.

They proceeded to carry out this intention, and sat up till about 2 or 3 A. M , but nothing appeared. A then said he should not stay up any longer, as he did not believe the animal would come; but B announced his intention of waiting half an hour longer by himself. There were large windows opening down to the floor of the veranda, and through one of these A retired, and after entering his room, had just closed the window, and was gazing out for an instant, when he saw a dark mass land in the veranda, right on to his frien I, then heard sounds of a scuffle, and a cry for help. Seizing his rifle, to which a sword bayonet was attached, and flinging up the window, he rushed out in time to see B walking down the steps that led up to the veranda alongside of the tiger with his hand in the latter's mouth.

A was afraid to fire lest he should hit his friend, so, running after him, he, with admirable presence of mind, went up to the tiger, and plunging his bayonet into the animal's body, at the same instant fired. There was a roar and a scuffl, and B took advantage of the moment to release his hand, and the tiger, after tumbling, died. B's hand was terribly mauled. - [Court Journal.

"From Atlanta to the Sea."

It was thirty-one days after starting from Atlanta before Sherman re-opened communication with the North. In that time he had destroyed two hundred miles of railroad, and broken up every connection between the Confederate forces east and west of Georgia. He had done more than a hundred million dollars' worth of damage, consumed the corn and fodder, as well as the cattle, hogs, sheep, and poultry of a region three hundred mites long and sixty broad, carried away ten thousand horses and mules, and liberated countless numbers of slaves. Sixty thousand men and thirty-five thousand animals had been abundantly fed, and when the troops reached the coast they needed no provisions but bread. They started with five thousand head of cattle and a rived with ten thousand. The teams were in splendid condition, and not a wagon was lost on the road. The army had captured so many horses that Sherman ordered them to be shot, because it demoralized the troops to ride. - [St.

A Kansas "Boom."

A traveler in Kansas while crossing a prairie the other day came upon a party of men who seemed to be preparing the land for agricultural purposes.

"My friend," said the traveler, addressing one of the men, "you are laying off your corn rows quite a distance apart."

"Corn rows?" the min gasped.

"Yes, those rows over there." "My stars, stranger!" exclaimed the Kansas man, "is it possible you ain't hearn of it?"

"Heard of what?"

"Of the boom. Man alive, them ain't corn rows over thar; they air streets, an' this here is a city. You air now on the corner of Commercial and Emporium streets, an' not in the check of a corn row, as you mout suppose,"-[New York Tribune.

The Methodists.

Figures printed in the Methodist Year Book show that on January 1, 1887, Methodism throughout the world numbered 35,000 traveling preachers and 6,320,000 members. In the United States there are 27,000 traveling preachers an 1 4,000,000 members, and a population of over 15,000,000, or more than one-fourth of the population of the entire country-56,000,000. The Methodist Episcopal Church alone numbers in the United States 12,800 traveling preachers and 2,000,000 members, having 20,000 churches, worth $77,000,000; 7,500 parsonages, worth $11,000,000; 144 college and other school properties, worth, including endowments, $15,000,-000, making a total of $103 000,000.

The Formation of Daw.

The prevalent story of the formation of dew is quite disarranged by the observation of Professor H. E. Alvord, who has lately published a treatise on the subject. He employed nice instruments, such as have been described by Sachs and Darwin. He found that on clear nights when the atmosphere was rarified, the lighter stratum would be easily pushed out of the way by the cool and heavier body drawn by its weight to the surface. The thermometer at four inches from the ground would in these cases range from 5 to 10 degrees lower than at four feet from the ground.

The following words, in pruise of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription as a remedy for those delicate diseases and weak-nesses peculiar to women, must be of interest to every sufferer from such maladies. They are fair samples of the spontaneous expressions with which thousands give utterance to their sense of gratitude for the inestimable boon of health which has been restored to them by the use of this world-famed medicine.

JOHN E. SEGAR, of Millenbeck, Va., writes:
"My wife had been suffering for two or three years with female weakness, and had paid out one hundred dollars to physicians without relief. She took Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and it did her more good than all the medicine given to her by the physicians during the three years they had been practicing upon her."

THE GREATEST

EARTHLY BOON.

Mrs. George Herger, of Westfield, N. Y., writes: "I was a great sufferer from leucorrhea, bearing-down pains, and pain continually across my back. Three bottles of your Favorite Prescription' restored me to perfect health. I treated with Dr. —, for nine months, without receiving any benefit.

The Favorite Prescription' is the greatest earthly been to us poor suffering women."

THREW AWAY

Writes: "I took eleven bottles of your 'Favorite Prescription' and one bottle of your 'Pellets.' I am doing my work, and have been for some time. I have had to employ help for about sixteen years before I commenced taking your medicine. I have had to wear a supporter most of the time; this I have kaid aside, and feel as well as I ever did."

Mrs. May Gleason, of Nunica, Ottawa Co.
Mich., writes: "Your 'Favorite Prescription' has worked wonders in my case.
Again she writes: "Having taken several bottles of the 'Favorite Prescription' I have regained my health wonderfully, to the astonishand friends. I can now be on my feet all day, attending to the duties of my household.

TREATING THE WRONG DISEASE.

Many times women call on their family physicians, suffering, as they imagine, one from dyspepsia, another from heart disease, another from liver or kidney disease, another from nervous exhaustion or prostration, another with pain here or there, and in this way they all present alike to themselves and their ensy-going and indifferent, or over-busy doctor, separate and distinct diseases, for which he prescribes his pills and potions, assuming them to be such, when, in reality, they are all only symptoms caused by some womb disorder. The physician, ignorant of the cause of suffering, encourages his practice until large bills are made. The suffering patient gets no better, but probably worse by reason of the delay, wrong treatment and consequent complications. A proper medicine, like Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, directed to the cause would have entirely removed the disease, thereby dispelling all those distressing symptoms, and instituting comfort instead of prolonged misery.

FAILED.

Mrs. E. F. Morgan, of No. 71 Lexington St., East Boston, Mass., says: "Five years ago 1 was a dreadful sufferer from uterine troubles.
Having exhausted the skill of three physicians. I was completely discouraged, and so weak I could with difficulty cross the room using the local treatment recommended in his 'Common Sense Medical Adviser.' I commenced to improve at once. In three months I was perfectly cured, and have had no trouble since. I wrote a letter to my family paper, briefly mentioning how my health had been restored, and offering to send the full particulur to any one writing me for them. and enclosing a stamped-cavelope for reply. I have received over four hundred letters.
In reply, I have described my case and the treatment used, and have carnestly advised them to 'do likewise.' From a great many I have received second letters of thanks, stating that they had commenced the use of 'Favorite Prescription,' had sent the $1.50$ required for the 'Medical Adviser,' and had applied the local treatment so fully and plainly laid down therein, and were much better already."

JEALOUS

Of Crystal, Mich., writes: "I was troubled with female weakness, leucorrhea and falling of the womb for seven years, so I had to keep my bed for a good part of the time. I doctored with an army of different physicians, and spent large sums of money, but received no lasting benefit. At last my husband persuaded me to try your medicines, which I was loath to do, because I was prejudiced against ithem, and the doctors said they would do me no good. I finally told my husband that if he would get me some of your medicines, I would try them against the advice of my physician. He got me six bottles of the 'Favorite Prescription,' also six bottles of the 'Discovery,' for ten dollars. I took three bottles of 'Discovery' and four of 'Favorite Prescription,' and I have been a sound woman for four years. I then gave the balance of the medicine to my sister, who was troubled in the same way, and she cured herself in a short time. I have not had to take any medicine now for almost four years."
